When it comes to winning trust in government-run digital identity schemes, Fedorov believes that if you give the people an overwhelming amount of convenience that is accompanied by strong cybersecurity, then they will have no choice but to trust the technology.

11.

“The pandemic has accelerated our progress. First, people are really now demanding digital, online services. People have no choice but to trust technology. We see what kind of business is developing & this business is influencing the development of our services.” He said.

12.

“We have to make a product that is so convenient that a person will be able to disrupt their stereotypes, to breakthrough from their fears, and start using a government-made application” - Mykhailo Fedorov, Ukraine’s Minister of Digital Transformation.

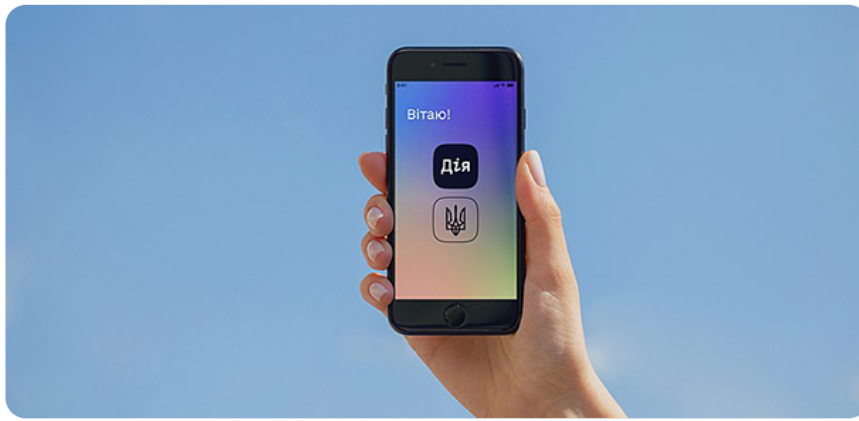

13.

“When we allow a person to register a business in three clicks; when we allow them to pay their taxes in two clicks — no matter how sceptical a person is about the technology, they will start using our services.” - He said.
